

Why the quakes did not cause tsunami

Wednesday's quake was a strike-slip fault

To generate giant tsunami waves, there should be great vertical displacement of the water column which happens only in the case of thrust fault (December 26, 2004).

Wednesday's small tsunami waves may be due to a small amount of oblique movement along the fault.

